

List of Contributors

Annette Schimmelpfennig holds a Master's Degree from the University of Cologne in English, Spanish and German philology. She is currently doing her research on her dissertation on the American author Bret Easton Ellis.

Caleb Sivy is an AHRC-funded third year PhD student working on the intersection of the visual and gender in Angela Carter and Virginia Woolf at Cardiff University.

Nancy Taber is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Education at Brock University. Her research interests include: the ways in which war, militarism, and gender are learned in daily life; women's experiences in western militaries; interconnections between military and academic gendered norms; and, sociocultural issues in fiction and popular culture.

Baiqing Zheng is a lecturer at School of International Studies, University of International Business and Economics, Beijing, China (100029), specializing in English and American Literature. She got Ph.D. from Beijing Foreign Studies University in 2009. From 2007 to 2008, she was a visiting scholar at Department of English, Yale University.