

List of Contributors

Eva-Maria Cersovsky studies English and History at the University of Cologne. She will finish her education in the summer of 2015. In 2011, she received an ERASMUS scholarship to spend nine months in England studying at the University of Durham. In July 2013, she was awarded a scholarship by the Studienstiftung des deutschen Volkes. Since 2012 she has been working as a student assistant and tutor at the History Department of the University of Cologne. Her main areas of interest are Medieval (Church) History, Cultural-History and Gender Studies.

Esther Dolas studies English and Social Sciences at the University of Cologne where she works as a student assistant at the English Department. Her research interests include post-genocidal narratives, gender studies, psychoanalytic theory as well as political philosophy.

Kate Hendricks is a former Marine Corps Officer, Pilates and fitness instructor, 200-hour Experienced Registered Yoga Teacher, and corporate Life Skills trainer. She holds a Master's degree in Health Promotion and is currently a doctoral candidate at the University of Alabama, writing a dissertation to complete her PhD in Health Promotion and Education with a graduate certificate in Women's Studies. To learn more about Kate, please visit www.katehendricks.com

Daniela Kellermann is currently training to become a German and English teacher at the University of Cologne. Kellermann is additionally involved in a special education teacher training to be able to teach German and English to disadvantaged students. She spent a year in the United States (Ohio) to enhance her English skills. Kellermann is mainly interested in the interplay between gender and politics in recent American autobiographies as well as in the connection between the notions of madness and gender in Renaissance tragicomedies.

Stefani Marghitu is a graduate student with the department of Culture, Media & Creative Industries at King's College London. Her current research project focuses on contemporary women showrunners, and her primary interests deal with post-network television, feminist TV criticism, and authorship. You can visit her web site at <http://www.stefaniamarghitu.com>.

Conrad Ng received his MA in film studies from University College London. He has previously written about crime and juvenile delinquency in the American teen movie and regionalism in contemporary American novels. Currently based in London, he is a freelance writer with an interest in popular culture, film and television criticism.

Hanh Nguyen is currently a PhD student at the University of Wollongong. Her research interest is English literatures and language teaching. Prior to the current position, she worked as a lecturer of English Literatures and Cultures at Military College of Foreign Languages, Vietnam. She was given special training in Methodology of English Language Teaching at International Training Centre, Melbourne 2006. She is also a council member of Wollongong University Postgraduate Association.

Sarah Plummer's academic background is in Sociology and Religious Studies, and she has practiced yoga for ten years. She is a 500-hour Registered Yoga Teacher, a certified Holistic Health Counselor, five-time Military Olympic athlete, and a former Marine Corps Intelligence Officer. Today, Sarah runs a small business working to bring holistic wellness training to trauma survivors and military veterans and is working towards her Doctor of Chiropractic degree. She is the author of "Just Roll With It". To learn more about Sarah, please visit her website at www.sempersarah.com

Lina Rahm is a doctoral student at the Dept. of Behavioural Sciences and Learning at Linköping university, Sweden. She holds a BSSc in Gender studies, an MSSc. in social and welfare studies and is currently researching aspects of citizenship education.

Sara Tewelde-Negassi is a student of History and English at the University of Cologne. Currently, she is studying to become a teacher and also working as a student assistant in the History Department at the University of Cologne. Besides her academic career, she is a member of the student council of the History Department where she advises freshmen. Furthermore, she works as a freelance private tutor.