

Issue 82
2022

GENDER FORUM

An Internet Journal for Gender Studies

Gender, Violence, and the State in Contemporary Speculative Fiction (II)

Edited by
Judith Rauscher and Marta Usiekiewicz

ISSN 1613-1878

Universität
zu Köln

Editors

Judith Rauscher
Johanna Pitetti-Heil
University of Cologne
English Department
Albertus-Magnus-Platz
D-50923 Cologne Germany
gender-forum@uni-koeln.de

Editorial Office

Julia Hahn-Klose (Editorial Assistant)
Leontien Pottthoff (Editorial Assistant)
Izel Ercanoglu (Editorial Assistant)
Maheen Muzaffar (Editorial Assistant)
Tensae Desta (Editing Intern)
gender-forum@uni-koeln.de

Editorial Board

Mita Banerjee
Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz (Germany)
Nilufer E. Bharucha
University of Mumbai (India)
Carmen Birkle
Philipps-University Marburg (Germany)
Ingrid Hotz-Davies
Eberhard Karls University Tübingen (Germany)
Nisha Kommattam
University of Chicago (USA)
Mahshid Mayar
University of Bielefeld (Germany)
Beate Neumeier, Founding Editor
University of Cologne (Germany)
Ralph Poole
University Salzburg (Austria)
Marta Usiekiewicz
University of Warsaw (Poland)
Chris Weedon
Cardiff University (UK)

About

gender forum is an open access, peer-reviewed academic journal dedicated to the intersectional discussion of re-configurations of gender and sexualities in the fields of literary and cultural production, the media, and the arts. Inaugurated by Beate Neumeier in 2002, the journal transitioned to a team of co-editors consisting of Judith Rauscher and Johanna Pitetti-Heil during the academic year of 2021.

Since the journal's inception, gender forum has focused on a multitude of questions ranging widely across the various theoretical perspectives of feminist criticism, gender studies, queer theory, and masculinity studies. The journal also publishes reviews and it occasionally includes interviews, fictional pieces, and poetry.

Positions expressed in articles that are published in gender forum are those of individual authors and not necessarily endorsed by the editors of gender forum.

Submissions

We currently only accept manuscripts for thematic issues. Please consult our calls for submissions: <http://genderforum.org/call-for-submissions/>

Manuscripts should conform to the current MLA Style (9th edition) and be between 5,000 and 8,000 words in length. Please include a bio-blurb and an abstract of roughly 300 words and send your manuscript (as an email attachment in MS Word format) to gender-forum@uni-koeln.de.

We always welcome reviews on recent releases in gender studies! Submitted reviews should conform to current MLA Style (9th edition), and should be between 750 and 1,000 words in length. Please note that the reviewed releases ought to be no older than 24 months.

Cover Image:
By Linz Franciz on Pexels -
<https://www.pexels.com/de-de/foto/flachfokus-fotografie-von-stacheldraht-3379664/>
(changes have been made)

Table of Contents

Johanna Pitetti-Heil: Editorial	1
Judith Rauscher and Marta Usiekiewicz: Introduction	3
Michaela Keck: Women's Complicity, Resistance, and Moral Agency: Margaret Atwood's The Handmaid's Tale and The Testaments	12
Sladja Blazan: "Something Beyond Pain": Race, Gender, and Hyperempathy in Octavia Butler's Parable of the Sower	34
Tram Nguyen: Feminist Memorializations in Marge Piercy and Rafael Carter	53
Stina Novak and Corina Wieser-Cox: "This is the World We Made": Queer Allegory, Neo-Colonial Militarization and Scientific Ethics in The Old Guard (2020)	75
List of Contributors	98

Editorial

Johanna Pitetti-Heil, University of Cologne, Germany

As the new general co-editor of gender forum, it is my greatest pleasure to be writing the editorial for the second special issue on “Gender, Violence, and the State in Contemporary Speculative Fiction,” guest-edited by Judith Rauscher and Marta Usiekniewicz. It is truly an honor to be stepping and growing into the shoes of one of gender forum’s general editors, and I am looking forward to continuing the legacy of founding editor Beate Neumeier, whose visionary work created Germany’s first English-language open-access journal for gender studies with a particular focus on literary and cultural studies. Resounding Judith Rauscher’s words from her editorial for issue 80 (2021), I want to express my awe and gratitude for the relentless commitment that Beate Neumeier and her team have poured into gender forum, which has grown into a living archive of feminist scholarship and research in gender studies and queer studies.

I could not have wished for a more wonderful co-editor than Judith Rauscher for this joint endeavor of making gender and queer studies freely available. Not only do we share our scholarly commitment to gender and queer studies, we also consider it our responsibility to support early career researchers in their first publishing processes and to provide a platform for scholars working from the margin in what remains a highly traditional and hierarchical university system, in which the ways of how to do things are not always readily available to everyone. My previous editorial work has prepared me well for these endeavors, but while technical expertise and experience with the editorial processes are certainly important to keep a journal running, it is the collective energy that an editorial team develops that makes the heart of a journal beat. I want to take this opportunity to thank Judith Rauscher and our student assistants—Izel Ercanoglu, Tensae Desta, Julia Hahn-Klose, Maheen Muzaffar, and Leontien Potthoff—for their warm welcome, their thorough editorial work, their creative ideas, and their scholarly and political commitment to intersectional gender and queer studies.

Gender and queer studies have not only been shaking to the core the compulsory heteronormative assumptions of identity and desire, they continuously, creatively, and poetically re-calibrate what it means, entails, and implies to think, feel, identify, and love otherwise. For many, doing this work is not merely an academic exercise but a deeply personal and political lived reality, which informs theory and critique and which comes with a variety of vulnerabilities and risks. Queer literature and other forms of queer cultural production have been lifelines in hostile environments, just as projects of “cruising utopia,” as José Esteban Muñoz entitled his 2009-monograph, have been pointing to the necessity of imagining queer political futures. Whether utopian, dystopian, or both, in penning speculative fiction, and “in all the brouhaha clanging about these unreal worlds,” as Samuel R. Delaney has underlined in “About 5,750 Words,” “chords are sounded in total sympathy with the real”—a real that, despite all the socio-cultural and political changes of the past forty years, is still structured along the lines of violently heteronormative configurations of gendered identity and desire. It is thus not surprising that this second issue on “Gender, Violence, and the State in Contemporary Speculative Fiction” in gender forum highlights the ways in which literary imagining reflects on and critiques the structures through which ideological state apparatuses yield power and exercise violence over non-conforming gendered bodies, identities, and practices. Writing about and publishing special issues on questions of gender and queerness in speculative fiction always offers opportunities of further pushing, widening, re-constructing, changing, oscillating, unthinking, and rethinking the structures that have been established around processes of subjectivation, desire, and potentialities of resistance. I invite all readers to critically enjoy this issue (and to read it along “Gender, Violence, and the State in Contemporary Speculative Fiction” I in issue 80 [2021]) . . . and if it sparks your own scholarly imagination to guest-edit a special issue of gender form, we welcome inquiries via gender-forum@uni-koeln.de.

Johanna Pitetti-Heil
General Co-Editor